Description of Ghent.

✂ The following account of Ghent, the place now appointed for the meeting of our Commissioners and those of Great Britain, is extracted from Morse's Gazetteer.

Ghent, a city, and capital of Flanders, at the conflux of the Scheld, Lis, Moeze, and Lieve, which with a great number of canals cut through it every way, divide the town into 26 small islands. The emperor Charles the V. was born in this town, the 5th of February, 1500. Besides the cathedral, it has 6 parish churches, and many religious houses; the streets are large, the market places spacious, in the midst of one of which is a statute of Charles V. in his imperial habit. It trades in corn, has cloth, linen, and silk manufactures, much assisted by 2 navigable canals, one to Sas de Ghent, the other to Burges, Ostend, &c. It has 55,161 inhabitants, and was taken by the French in 1794: 30 miles S. W. Antwerp, lon. 3 49 E, lat. 51 4 N.
